Dr. Mohamed T. Lahai
B. Sc., M. Sc. (USL), PhD (NU)
Dean, School of Agriculture

BIO-SKETCH

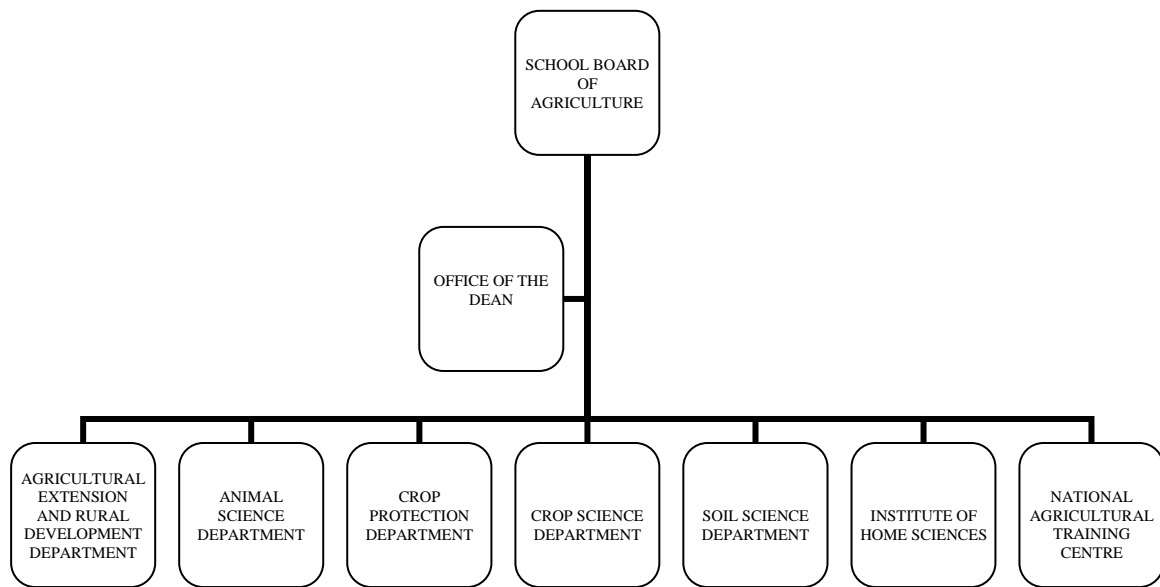

Dr. Mohamed T. Lahai received his B. Sc. in Agriculture in 1984 and M. Sc. in Crop Science in 1989 from the University of Sierra Leone and PhD in Crop Physiology in 2005 from Njala University, Sierra Leone. He teaches crop production, crop physiology and agricultural statistics courses and his research interests include stress physiology, plant nutrition and on-farm research. He is also a Principal Research Fellow at the Sierra Leone Agricultural Research Institute (SLARI) where he is involved in both on-farm and on-station research on improving farmers' productivity of rice, cassava, sweet potato, yam, groundnut, soybean and cowpea. He collaborates with International Institute of Tropical Agriculture (IITA), International Centre for Research in Semi-Arid Tropics (ICRISAT), International Centre for Tropical Agriculture (CIAT) and International Potato Centre (CIP) in the development of high yielding crop varieties, tolerant/resistant to major pests and diseases in Sierra Leone. He has attended several conferences on sustainable agricultural development in Africa and has over 20 publications in journals, conference proceedings and as book chapters.

1.0 GENERAL INFORMATION

1.1 Introduction

Njala University is the Agricultural University of Sierra Leone and therefore the School of Agriculture is the main entity of the University. Agriculture is the main stay of the Sierra Leone economy, contributing over 36 % to the GDP and employing over 70 % of the rural population. Therefore the role of the School of Agriculture in national development cannot be overemphasized. The School is made up of seven Departments/Institutes.

1.2 Structural Components

1.2.1 The Mission

The School sees itself as a facilitating agent in the areas of agricultural and national development and seeks to contribute positively to these areas. Considering the level of under-development in the country particularly in the agricultural sector, the areas of concern in which the School is of service seem inexhaustible. Thus the School addresses itself to issues on teaching, agricultural research and technology development and transfer to farmers and other relevant bodies.

1.2.2 Purpose

The purpose of the School based on its mission is therefore to provide higher education in agriculture through flexible admission policies to allow men and women equal opportunity regardless of tribe, belief and origin to higher education in agriculture for agricultural sector and national development.

1.2.3 General Objectives

- (a) provide instruction in all branches of agriculture and make provision for research and the advancement and dissemination of knowledge in agriculture
- (b) provide services in the area of agriculture for persons who are not regularly enrolled in the University
- (c) teach courses leading to the award of degrees, diplomas and certificates in all branches of agriculture

1.2.4 Goals

To achieve the above objectives the School relentlessly works towards:

- (a) the attainment of the highest academic standard competitive with regional and international agricultural institutions of higher learning
- (b) the provision of regular supplies of highly educated agriculturalists, nutritionists, food technologists and community development experts capable of effectively and efficiently managing the affairs of state and the community they serve
- (c) the contribution to agricultural and nutritional policies and decision making within framework of national development
- (d) the building of teaching and research capacity of academic staff to enhance their own as well as students intellectual horizon and promoting outreach goals through appropriate extension strategies

1.3 Accreditation and Academic Links

To strengthen academic and/ or research capacity and to foster international educational cooperation, various link arrangements exist between the School and institutions in and out of Sierra Leone. The School has links with the Sierra Leone Agricultural Research Institute (SLARI) and some of its staff members are Principal Research Fellows, Senior Research Fellows or Research Fellows involved in both on-farm and on-station research to improve farmers' productivity of rice, maize, cassava, sweet potato, yam, groundnut, soybean and cowpea. The School also collaborates with international research institutions such as International Institute of Tropical Agriculture (IITA), International Centre for Research in Semi-Arid Tropics (ICRISAT), International Centre for Tropical Agriculture (CIAT) and International Potato Centre (CIP) in the development of high yielding crop varieties, tolerant/resistant to major pests and diseases. The School has strong linkage with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) at Vienna, Austria, University of Ibadan (UI) and University of Agriculture, Abeokuta in Nigeria, Illinois University, Iowa State University and Oklahoma State University in the USA.

2.0 ACADEMIC PROGRAMMES

2.1 Degree and Certificate Programmes

The School of Agriculture offers a wide range of degree (B. Sc., M. Sc., M. Phil. and PhD), certificate and diploma (OD and HD) programmes. The Bachelors degree programmes are Honours. Each Department except National Agricultural Training Centre (NATC) offers all the above degree programmes. The certificate and diploma programmes are offered at NATC.

2.2 Programme Duration

The normal duration for Bachelors Degree in the School is four years. However, candidates with Higher National Diploma (HND) or Higher Teachers Certificate (HTC- secondary) or State Registered Nurse (SRN) are normally admitted into the second year and may complete the degree in three years. The duration for M. Sc. degree is 15 months, M. Phil. two years and PhD three years. The following certificate and diploma programmes are run by the School: Certificate in Agriculture General (two years) and OND (two years) and HND (three years) in Agronomy, Animal Science or Forestry. Candidates with OND may be admitted into the second year of the HND programme.
